Why Don’t Women Climb to the Top? Evidence from French Politics

Quentin Lippmann

1Paris School of Economcs (PSE) – PSE – PSE, 48 bd Jourdan, 75014 Paris, France

Abstract

Increasing female representation in politics has been an objective pursued by many countries during the last two decades. To that end, quotas have been introduced, assuming they would serve as stepping stones towards higher positions. Exploiting evidence from France, this article questions this assumption and tests whether the 50

Keywords: Empirics

*Speaker